Mary M. Juzwik

(September 2012)

Mary M. Juzwik is associate professor of Language and Literacy in the department of Teacher Education (TE) at Michigan State University (MSU), where she teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in writing, discourse, and English education. She is an affiliate of the Rhetoric, Writing, and American Cultures Program and the English department at MSU and a principal investigator at the Literacy Achievement Research Center. Mary holds degrees in English from the University of Wisconsin, Madison (PhD), Middlebury College (MA), and Wheaton College (BA). She taught middle and high school English in a range of contexts in the United States, including the Navajo Nation and urban Chicago. She now studies issues related to literacy teaching and learning, including the moral and rhetorical dimensions of teaching; linguistic and cultural diversity in English classrooms; writing theory and instruction; teacher identity; and ways of supporting dialogically organized instructional practices in teaching and teacher preparation. Mary's interdisciplinary work on these issues engages with scholarly traditions such as narrative studies, interactional sociolinguistics, and rhetorical theory. Mary's work has been recognized by the National Council of Teachers of English Promising Researcher Award, the Ghoddousi Mentor Award, and the MSU College of Education Excellence and Innovation in Teaching Award. She also received the Edward B. Fry Book Award from the Literacy Research Association for her book, The Rhetoric of Teaching: Understanding the Dynamics of Holocaust Narratives in an English Classroom (Hampton, 2009). She co-edited Narrative Discourse Analysis for Teacher Educators: Managing Cultural Differences in Classrooms (Hampton, 2011) and co-authored Reading and Writing Genre with Purpose in K-8 Classrooms (Heinemann, 2012) and has published numerous articles, essays, reviews, and commentaries. She is incoming co-editor of Research in the Teaching of English.
